Monthly Pack Meeting Held On Friday

Captain George Kimball and thirty Cub Scouts, their parents and friends met for the regular monthly pack meeting in the recreation room of Murray High school on Friday night at 7:30 p.m.

The meeting was opened with the Cub Scout giving the scout oath and the oath led by Captain Kimball.

T. C. Collier, field representative of the WOW, introduced Buford Hart, who presented the Pack with a large American flag and smaller one for each of the five dens.

Captain Kimball led the group in the pledge to the flag and in singing "My Country 'Tis of Thee". Each den will make its own staff for the gift flags.

The Cub Scouts lined up for inspection by Major George Hallman, who gave a short talk on the principles used in inspection.

He announced Mrs. Jones' den number five as first prize winner and Mrs. Valentine's den number four as second place winner. They were each given a ribbon.

Conservation was the theme used for the month and each den had on display bird houses, painted flower pots, Indian head dresses and collections they had made in den meetings.

Mrs. C. C. Lowry's den gave appropriate poems on Conservation and Mother's Day.

They each gave to their mother flower pots they had made and planted.

Mrs. Walter Blackburn's den gave the "Conservation Pledge."

The door prize was won by Mrs. Everett Jones' den for having the most people registered at the meeting.

A challenge was given to each den to choose a yell to present to the Pack next month. The best one will be adopted as the Pack yell.

An outing is planned for the Pack meeting in May to be held at the City Park where games, contests and hot dogs will be enjoyed.

Answers Filed By Attorneys In Sheppard Case

CLEVELAND, Ohio, May 2 (AP)—Prosecuting attorneys filed formal answers to Dr. Samuel H. Sheppard's claim of "new" evidence, and said the young osteopath made "unwarranted" claims that someone else committed the crime.

The answers were submitted to Common Pleas Judge Edward E. Byrd, who will decide after a Wednesday hearing whether to grant the convicted wife-killer a new trial.

Dr. Sheppard's attorneys submitted affidavits Wednesday to support their claims that newly discovered evidence pointed to someone else's guilt in the bludgeoning slaying of Marilyn Sheppard last Independence Day.

The prosecution's four affidavits challenged the findings of Dr. Paul L. Kirk, West Coast criminologist. Kirk had said a three-quarter inch blood spot on a wall of the murder bedroom did not come from Dr. Sheppard of his murdered wife, but from the real killer.

Second Child Dies From Inoculations, Confidence Unshaken

By UNITED PRESS

A second child died of infantile paralysis after receiving a shot of Salk vaccine, but public confidence in the revolutionary polio killer appeared to be unshaken today.

Mass inoculations of first and second graders across the nation continued even though 35 youngsters have come down with polio after receiving shots.

In Washington, meanwhile, the President's National Polio Advisory Committee held its first meeting to draft quotas and priorities for distribution of the precious vaccine.

The latest Salk-inoculated child to die was 7-year-old Janet Lee Kincaid of Moscow, Idaho.

Janet Lee received a shot on April 18 or 19 and was rushed to St. Luke's Hospital at Spokane, Wash., after she became ill. Only Saturday she was reported in good condition with "slight" paralysis in one shoulder. But she died Sunday.

The other polio fatality was also an Idaho child. She was Susan Pierce, 7, of Pocatello, who died last week.

Both of the children had received shots of vaccine prepared by the Cutter Laboratories of Berkeley, Calif. Practically all of the 35 polio-stricken children were among 500,000 inoculated with Cutter vaccine and a temporary ban has been imposed on the baby product.

Seventeen of the afflicted youngsters are in California, where the Cutter vaccine was most widely used, but Idaho appeared to be getting the most serious cases.

An Air National Guard plane flew an iron lung from Boise to Lewiston, Idaho, for 7-year-old Bonny Gale Pound. The girl, who received her polio shot April 19, was reported in critical condition.

Two other second graders at Moscow, Idaho, and another child at Ashka, Idaho, were reported in improved condition after coming down with polio.

In California, the rash of cases had prompted a halt in the mass vaccination program. But state health Director Malcolm Merrill said he may lift the ban today.

Inoculations Continue

Mass inoculations were also halted in Vermont and in other scattered areas. But the vast majority of health authorities were continuing to inoculate first and second graders at as fast a clip as possible.

In Chicago, where one of the 35 cases occurred, 88,000 public school children were to start getting their shots today. And the U.S. surgeon general, Leonard A. Scheele, said he was "very pleased" at the withdrawal of the Cutter vaccine.

However, Scheele appealed to parents and medical societies to limit inoculations to the children between one and nine who run "the greatest risks of getting polio."

Scheele's appeal and the meeting of the advisory committee in Washington came as demands increased for strict regulation of the vaccine's distribution.

National Home Demonstration Week Observed By Homemakers Throughout The County Here

By Mrs. Curtis Hays

Eastside Homemakers Club

This is National Home Demonstration Week. A time when members of the Homemakers Clubs of Calloway County, along with those throughout the nation, are given special recognition. Thus the value of home demonstration work is called to the attention of all.

Those of you who are not familiar with the work may ask "What is home demonstration work and why should it be of interest to me?"

Home demonstration work is an adult educational program for women, sponsored by your land grant college and the Extension Service of the United States Department of Agriculture. Its purpose is to help the American women become better homemakers.

This program was started in the early 1900's at the request of rural women. At that time rural women were a class set apart from their urban sisters. The rural woman was easy to pick out in a crowd because her clothes were often poorly fitted, poorly constructed and unattractive. She was retiring in manner and uninformed on current events. All too often her children too were timid around city folks. In her home she worked long, hard hours under the most adverse conditions. The kitchen was often a big ill equipped and poorly planned room. No running water, no ice box, no sink or cabinets. The cooking was done on a temperamental wood range which was either too hot or too cold depending upon the type fuel she had on hand or the direction in which the wind was blowing. Food could be kept for only a short time, even when packed in the cellar or lowered into the well. Food preservation was a three day process and much of it spoiled. For much of the winter season she was isolated because of impassable roads. There were few, if any, magazines or newspapers coming into the rural home to bring information on improved methods of homemaking. The only way for many young women to obtain advice or information was to turn to their mothers or other older women who, in the past, had turned to their mothers. Thus there was much misinformation as well as a lack of good information.

The department of agriculture recognized the importance of the homemaker in regard to sound farm economy. The Secretary of Agriculture wrote letters to farm women in several states. The year was 1912. He asked what could his department do to help them. Back came a flood of mail. An incredible number of the women gave the same answer: We want an organization where we can meet and learn each other. We want to learn better ways of preserving foods and keeping our families healthy. We want someone available to answer our questions intelligently and help us become better homemakers.

Just a year later in 1914, Congress passed the Smith Lever Act which provided a method of filling the women's requests. Through federal, state and county appropriations came a home demonstration agent to the county. She organized the women into clubs, helped them work out what they wanted to study, gave demonstrations, taught them how to make their homes more attractive and comfortable, taught them the best ways of canning foods and became their friend. For the first time in history, the lonely isolated farm women were given an equal opportunity to take part in social and educational activities. Today we find it impossible to pick out the farm woman from a group. Her home is as comfortable and attractive as those in the city. Her clothes and manner are no different. She is a respected member of her family and community and her opinion is sought out and respected.

How much credit for this improvement is due to the home demonstration program? It is true that since that day that has been a steady rise in farm economy. The rural electric program has provided the power without which we could not enjoy the many modern appliances we have in our homes. Better rural programs, better telephone and radio communication, and better and more widely circulated magazines have all contributed to the way of life. However, these things help improve our living standards only in so far as we are capable of using them. Every homemaker knows that the basic ingredient for a well run household is know-how. No modern range can cook any better balanced meal than the cook places on it. No sewing machine can do more than sew—the selection of pattern and fabric is up to the seamstress. So we find that you first must educate women in the basic principles of homemaking. The young homemaker of today finds it is necessary to learn wise money management along with the arts of cooking and sewing. Only through long range planning can a family make material gain. The old slogan for economy which can "make over, make do, or do without" is as outmoded as the hoop skirt. Homemakers today are learning a new slogan, "wise buying, better use, boasted income."

The home demonstration agent never says "scrap every thing you have and start over." She says instead "analyze what you have, decide upon what you need, and then plan toward that goal." Specialists can show you the way. Some things may fit into the complete picture nicely, others may need re-styling or refinishing. Still others may need to be replaced over a period of time, until your goal is reached. This holds true whether you are refinishing your entire house or accumulating a good basic wardrobe.

The field of study which is open to members of Homemakers Clubs is almost unlimited. Any phase of home making or home management that is taught in college home economics departments is available. One agent expressed it thus "home making begins at the front gate, goes through the house and ends at the kitchen door where home management takes over." There are specialists from the University of Kentucky's Extension Service who come to the organized counties to teach club project leaders, who in turn teach the other club members, in the lessons they have chosen. It is possible for members of Homemakers Clubs to obtain the equivalent of a college education in home economics.

Home demonstration work has proved so valuable that it has grown from a band of home demonstration agents assisting a few hundreds of women to an organization of 3700 agents and over 3 million club women throughout the United States, many of whom live in urban areas. In this county we have sixteen (16) clubs with a membership of approximately 325. Are you interested in learning more about the homemakers clubs and their work? If so let me extend to you an invitation to join us as we celebrate National Home Demonstration Week. It is our desire that we all learn to improve in our chosen profession of homemakers.

Second Raft Stopped By Huge Waves

MONTEREY, Calif. (AP)—A Coast Guard cutter plucked the five man crew of the raft Lehi from their floundering craft in pre-dawn darkness early today.

"All passengers rescued from raft Lehi II, including Skipper Baker," the rescue craft "Active" reported by radio.

The rescue occurred 44 miles off the California coast in stormy seas.

One of the raft's crewmen was reported "so weak from hunger he could hardly move."

None of the raft's occupants had eaten since they set out from San Francisco Friday with plans to drift across 2500 miles of open ocean to the Hawaiian Islands.

When they were pulled aboard the Coast Guard rescue vessel they were wet, cold, hungry and weak.

The raft was left to flounder in the heavy swells of the Pacific Ocean.

The Coast Guard rescue ship reached the battered raft early today. It reported on arrival at the scene that a raft would have to be launched to save Devere Baker, the 39-year-old captain of the Lehi, and his four crewmen.

The Active sped to the scene in answer to a distress call from the raft Sunday night. A Coast Guard patrol vessel and a search plane also went to the Lehi's aid.

Once the men were aboard, the Active was expected to bring them to Monterey.

Besides Baker, the crewmen were Leonard J. Hall, 33, Tacoma, Wash.; William H. Souza, 33, Hayward, Calif.; George B. Harris, 27, and Crawford Hartley, 19, Oakland, Calif.

The five-sided Lehi II began breaking up Sunday in a severe storm—the worst I've ever been in," according to Baker.

At one point, a 20-foot wall of water almost capsize the 40-foot-long craft.

The raft had set out from San Francisco Friday in an attempt to drift to Hawaii across 2500 miles of ocean. The crew was to subsist on fish and distilled sea water.

Another and smaller raft, the Lehi I, ran aground of coastal currents last July and was finally abandoned near Santa Barbara, Calif. At last report, the raft was drifting somewhere off the coast of South America. Salvagers removed its equipment when the raft was off the coast of Mexico.

Both voyages were to have been shakedown cruises for a more ambitious project. Baker, an elder in the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-Day Saints, wanted to sail the raft from the Orient to Central America.

He was hoping to prove a passage in the Book of Mormon that a Jewish priest named Lehi floated from the Persian Gulf to Guatemala, where he founded the Mayan civilization.

Statement Made By County Judge On Homemakers Clubs

By virtue of serving as County Judge, of Calloway County, during the past 19 months, it has been my good fortune to be in position to observe the work, functions and value of all the various organizations in Calloway County connected with agriculture, farm homes, etc. I have been particularly interested in becoming more familiar with the work, functions and objectives of the organizations dealing with rural life in Calloway County, and specifically the Homemakers Club of Calloway County.

I would not for one moment minimize the importance and the value of the various farm and home organizations in Calloway County, but close observation discloses and reveals conclusively that the Homemakers Club of Calloway County is of tremendous and inestimable value in promoting better home life in Calloway County by and through the club's various programs and activities designed to improve home economics through canning programs, etc., increasing the comfort of the home by enlarging and increasing the conveniences in the home through the various planned programs.

On behalf of the Fiscal Court of Calloway County and myself as Judge of Calloway County, it is a pleasure to express our appreciation, personally and officially, for the many contributions of the Calloway County Homemakers Club and to pledge our continued support of this organization.

Waylon Hayburn, Judge of Calloway County

"MONSTER" NOW FRIGHTENED

Bela Lugosi, 72-year-old actor who has frightened more people than anybody else who ever lived, is now frightened himself.

He recently applied for admission at a state institution in California for treatment as a drug addict.

Also he is broke after earning millions in night-clubs,
on the stage and screen, and his fourth wife divorced
him about a year ago.

He says he is afraid of people, principally newspaper reporters, child actors, and others, but he is also afraid of noise, and fears death more than anything else.

He says he always hated acting monster parts and preferred romantic roles. He stumbled into his famed "Dracula" role by accident, he says.

All of us have known characters like Lugosi. The only feeling we have for them is one of pity.

When a fellow comes to the twilight of his life and says he always did something he preferred not to do one can't help but doubt his integrity.

With remarkably few exceptions, people do what they want to do. If they pander a weakness, whether it be alcohol or drugs, it is usually because they want to pamper it.

We believe most folks make a mistake by wasting too much sympathy on an alcoholic or drug addict. It is well to treat them with consideration, but there is no need to go overboard with our sympathy.

Lugosi acted monster parts because it paid him to do so. He probably went through four divorces because he didn't measure up as a husband. And he probably had bad habits, including the dope habit, because he wanted to.

Of course a person is helpless after almost any bad habit gets the best of him. And he needs treatment and understanding. He doesn't deserve the kind of sentimental slush that seems to be heaped upon Bela Lugosi.

Pitchers Turn In Brilliant Performances On Yesterday

By FRED DOWN
United Press Sports Writer

The major leagues' long suffering
hurlers turned back the clock Sunday with the season's most brilliant mound performances to celebrate the 35th anniversary of the classic pitching duel of 1920.

Bob Feller and Herb Score gave 26,395 Cleveland fans the day's top thrill with a pair of dazzling performances as the Indians downed the Boston Red Sox, 2-0 and 2-1.
First, the 36-year-old Feller tossed the 12th one-hitter of his fabulous career. Then, Score, who was only four years old when Feller pitched his first one-hitter in 1920, struck out a season's high of 16 batters
and threatened Feller's all-time record of 18 strikeouts in one contest.

That Wasn't All
But that wasn't all. Johnny An-tonelli went 16 brilliant innings to give the New York Giants a 2-1 verdict over the Cincinnati Red-legs. Bob Turley turned in a sizing four-hitter as the New York Yankees scored a 6-1 win to snap
the Detroit Tigers' seven game winning streak and Ronnie Kline flipped a seven-hitter as the Pittsburgh Pirates downed the St.
Louis Cardinals, 7-0. The Cards won the first game of the double-header 4-3.

All in all, it was a fitting celebration for the 25th anniversary of the famous 25th inning, 1-1 pitching duel between Leon Cadore of Brooklyn and Doc Cougher of Boston on May 1, 1930.

Feller, who holds the modern record of three no-hitters and a dozen one-hitters, pitched a no-hitter for 6 1/3 innings before catcher Sammy White singled cleanly to center field. White's hit came after Cleveland catcher
John Hegan couldn't hold a potential third strike foul tip on a 2-2 pitch. Only four Red Sox reached first base safely as Feller gained his first 1955 victory and the 26th of his career.

Kid Gavilan On Skids With Ratings

NEW YORK (AP)—Former welterweight champion Kid Gavilan, skidding rapidly since losing his title
to Johnny Saxton last October, faded almost out of the welterweight picture today when the monthly ratings of Ring Magazine placed him eighth in the division.

Gavilan, the one-time Cuban hawk whose rapid hands and all-around ring generalship carried him to the title in July 1932, returned to the ring after the loss to Saxton of New York and squeezed out an unimpressive majority decision over Ernie Durando of Bayonne, N. J., on Feb. 4.

Gavilan then lost in succession
to Hector Constantine of Trinidad, the elongated Bobby Dykes of Miami.

The "Kid," who was ranked fourth last month, is now listed behind Carmen Basilio, Vince Martinez, Tony DeMarco, Ramon Fuentes, Maurice Harper, Constantine, and Del Flanagan. Freddie Dawson
and Virgil Atkins are rated behind him.

Despite Mexican Paul Macias
11th round knockout victory over Chamern Songkritrat of Thailand,
Ring Magazine continues to list Robert Cohen of France as the world bantamweight king. Macias is ranked as the No. 1 contender, while Songkritrat is rated sixth.

Among the heavyweights, Nino Valdes of Cuba, by-passed for a title shot at Rocky Marciano in favor of England's Don Cockell, remains the leading challenger,
while Tommy Hurricane Jackson of New York, who currently is on a winning streak, has been upped from sixth to fifth. Jimmy Slade of New York has dropped the top 10 in favor of Charley Norris, Jersey City, N. J., who is ranked 10th.

Willie McFie of Germany has been moved up from ninth to fifth in the light-heavyweight division,
while Eduardo Lausse of Argentina has returned in eighth, along with Dykes who is 10th.

Income In 1953 Averaged $1,187

Frankfort, Ky. — The average income of Kentuckians in 1953 was $1,187, with the income in various counties ranging from $368 in Martin County to a high of $1,944 in Jefferson, the Research and Statistics Service of the Department of Economic Security reported today.

Only six counties, Jefferson, Mc-Cracken, Fayette, Boyd, Kenton
and Campbell, were listed with an average income of more than $1,500.

In 25 counties, Boone, Shelby, Hart, Franklin, Anderson, Wood-
ford, Boyle, Harrison, Bourbon, Clark, Carroll, Mason, Bracken, Robertson,
Fleming, Davies, Henderson, Hopkins, Warren, Marshall, Graves, Ballard, Fulton, Bullitt and Meade,
the average income ranged from $1,000 to $1,499.

The remaining counties had average income of under $1,000.

The report showed that 45 of every 100 Kentuckians are in dependent or potentially dependent age groups - under 18 or 65 and over - the ages most likely to depend for economic support on their families or communities.

Only a small part of this potentially dependent population lives in communities which are best able financially to support dependents,
the industrially rich cities.

Fewer than one-fourth of the children in Kentucky and only 30 per cent of the older people live in six counties with per capita income of $1,500 and over, but residents of these six counties received a little more than half of Kentucky's total of $3,400,000,000 individual income in 1953.

In contrast, residents of 88 counties with a per capita income below $1,000 received 31 per cent of the Kentucky income but accounted for almost 60 per cent of the child population in the state and half
the aged persons.

as if they were stock quotations. Reynolds was wasting his time as he tried to get anything more out of her than the Grand theater. Eric jumped to his feet, yelled, "Stop!" and strode over to the stage.

Breaking a wooden self-conscious embrace with visible relief, the two on-stage faced him. "Can't you relax, Tom?" Eric demanded. "You are in a mood, garden making love to a beautiful girl—not on a parade ground taking a salute. Loosen up, can't you?"

Behind him the telephone rang. Bill Kennedy answered it. "For you, Eric," he extended the receiver. "Merry-o, I think."

At this hour, Merry-o? A pang of alarm went through Eric. Why wasn't she in bed?

He clamped the receiver to his ear. "Hello, Merry-o?"

Her voice, tight and quavery, carried through the Blue room. "Daddy, is that you?"

"Yes, Merry-o. This is me. Is anything wrong?"

"Oh, daddy, can you come home? Can you please come home quickly?"

"Is Gran sick, Merry-o?"

"Yes. She can't talk, hardly. I heard a funny noise in her room and I went in. And her face is all twisted and queer-looking, and she—she's just lying there, trying to talk and it's so strange and thick. . . I wish you would hurry home, daddy."

"Merry-o, listen. I've toned down his sense of urgency. 'Don't be afraid. I'll be there right away.' 'Right away?'"

"Ten minutes, Pumpkin."

He hung up.

All of them had heard the little girl's panic-stricken voice. They closed in around him with intuitive sympathy. Bill Kennedy handed him his hat and put him into his coat.

"Stroke, I think," Eric said. "Someone call Trace Fellows, will you? Have him come to the house right off. Tell him to hurry."

Landon had on her coat and was beside him, her head tilted back to him. They ran together. Their steps echoed hollowly along the empty, draughty corridor. Eric pulled the door open and they went out, heads ducked against a blizzard night that two hours ago had been star-clear.

Eric whisked off the windows and Landon started the motor and wipers. She was trembling all over. If Gran died, how would she bear it? When Eric got in, snow powdering his coat, she slid her hand through his arm, clutching in the stiffness of fear and panic.

Eric patted her hand. "I am scared, too," he said. "But I can't drive with you hanging on like this."

She freed his arm instantly, and summoned a stiff, small smile. "I'm all right. I'm going to be all right."

"That's the girl," he rolled the window down and frowned around at the snow-filled driveway. "I should have parked on the street. I hope we can make it out of here without chains."

The rear wheels failed up a geyser of whiteness, and then they were out on the plowed street,
